

Top of the Class – The Midwest roster includes men and women who have established outstanding records at their various professional schools. Owner Deborah Weaver mentors court reporting students through service on professional training boards and the sharing of expertise as a visiting instructor and seminar leader. The company is a magnet for top professional court reporters and trial support technicians.

Scheduling – Operating as a scheduling hub for all Midwest reporters, the company can provide an immediate response to clients' requests. This ensures steady workflow for both reporters and clients. Deposition scheduling also available online at www.midwestlitigation.com

Support – Midwest provides each court reporter with business support services: Compensation is guaranteed weekly, direct deposit payment for all work completed. Deposition scheduling, printing, delivery and benefits at group rates are also part of the Midwest reporter package.

Continuing Education – Midwest brings continuing education seminars in-house. This provides reporters access, without charge, to the hours necessary to maintain professional licenses and board certifications. A belief in the continual update of credentials, above and beyond licensing, has also been a company cornerstone since its inception.

Midwest – People dedicated to their clients and to the pursuit of professional excellence in the field of court reporting and trial services.
